

AL-I-A-055 Boys Forestry Camp Superintendent's Residence
Green Ridge State Forest
Pratt Hollow, Allegany Co. MD
Not Eligible

The Civilian Conservation Corps built this one-story log house in the 1930s. The gable roofed building rests on a stone foundation. A large exterior chimney of local coursed stone is located at the west side. An entrance featuring a board and batten door adjoins the chimney to the north. Frame additions cover the east and south sides. In the north gable end an exterior concrete block stove flue chimney is flanked by sets of 6/6 sash windows. On the interior the fireplace includes a tablet bearing the insignia of the Maryland Department of Forestry. The walls are sheathed in vertical beveled boards.

This building is somewhat deteriorated; it has been altered by additions, and it is not the best example of its type. It is recommended as not individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This log house dates from the 1930s when the Civilian Conservation Corps maintained a camp at this site. It is part of a complex located adjacent to the headquarters of the Green Ridge State Forest at the south side of U.S. Route 40 near the point where it crosses Fifteenmile Creek. The complex of which this structure is a part consists mostly of modern buildings and is leased by the Department of Natural Resources to the Department of Juvenile Services which operates a Boys' Forestry Camp there.

The structure known as the "Supervisor's house" is a one story log building with a frame wing extending to its south. The construction is typical of that used by the CCC consisting of stacked logs cut smooth on their top and bottom surfaces while the exterior face is left rounded but stripped of bark. Alternate courses of logs overlap at the corners but show no form of notching.

One of the most prominent features of the building is its large exterior stone chimney constructed of coursed native rock. At the interior is a stone faced fireplace with an arched opening and stone mantel ledge. Above the mantel shelf set in the chimney front is a tablet depicting the insignia of the Maryland Department of Forestry. Interior wall surfaces in the main room are covered with vertical bevel edged panels.

The building seems to be fair to good condition and is apparently used primarily for storage.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This log house has architectural significance as an example of a type of construction popularized by the Civilian Conservation Corps. The type of log house construction used by the CCC is quite different from the traditional form of log building which utilized hewn logs joined at the corners with one of several forms of notching. In the traditional form, also, spaces between the logs were chinked and daubed rather than filled with a secondary log as in the case of the CCC construction. This structure was once part of a CCC forestry camp.
